

Prescription

The course will consist of a substantial project, working on a software research and development task. Generally it will be done as a placement in industry, but could, in certain cases, be an industry-sourced (or industry-related) project done within the school. The project would involve supervision by an academic as well as the industry employer, and will involve formal and informal.

Course learning objectives

Students who pass this course should be able to:

1. Design and implement a solution to an appropriate software engineering problem.
2. Evaluate, justify, and explain their solution in terms of technical quality, fitness for purpose, and societal impact, including reliability, safety, sustainability, privacy, and security.
3. Work professionally and cooperatively within a company or organisation.

Course content

SWEN 589 is part of the MSwDev program taught in the Wellington ICT Graduate School. It is a supervised 60 point project, working on an industrial software research and development task, generally as a placement in industry.

The course will consist of a substantial project, working on a software research and development task. Generally it will be done as a placement in industry, but could, in certain cases, be an industry-sourced (or industry-related) project done within the school.
